

AudioRally

AudioRally creates collaborating sound design and music compositions for the game-, movie-, television- and animation-industry.

AudioRally provides the best possible audiotrack and music composition(s) through proactive planning and close cooperation with clients.

Audio integration usually takes place at the post-production stage of a project. We distinguish ourselves by thinking actively about sound at an early stage of a project, thus letting our clients experience the added value of sound throughout the development stages. This will greatly enhance the final result, since integration of all media can be considered while making creative and developmental decisions.

Especially in the case of game audio, where audio and visual work closely together towards the final game experience, much is gained by starting sound design at the concept stage, so that decisions can be made about the role of audio within the game. At AudioRally we help design the use of audio within the game engine and develop an efficient work collaboration with our clients.

The strength of AudioRally lies within the synergy between sound design and music composition, using the complete audio spectrum.
